Ajman University believes that the United Nations' 17 Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) are calling higher education – from individuals to institutions – to act now on the most pressing challenges facing humanity and the natural world. Considering our collective role creating and sharing knowledge, universities must stand united as leaders in addressing the issues set out in Transforming our world: the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development.

As one of the Arab World's leading and most diverse institutions, Ajman University's campus is a microcosm of the world at large. We are comprised of students and stakeholders representing 80+ different nations – each bringing ideas from their cultures and countries about making and keeping sustainability part of our collective responsibility. Together, we are demonstrating our commitment to the SDGs through AU's learning environment, public engagement, and campus operations.

We hold ourselves accountable by participating in transparent reporting processes such as this one for the Times Higher Education University Impact Rankings. The process of creating this report, and evaluating our own efforts thus far, has deepened AU's commitment and resolve to play a dynamic role in tackling the world's SDGs by 2030.

Dr. Karim Seghir

Chancellor

Introduction

The 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development, adopted by all United Nations Member States in 2015, provides a shared blueprint for peace and prosperity for people and the planet, now and into the future. At its heart are the 17 Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), which are an urgent call for action by all countries - developed and developing - in a global partnership. They recognize that ending poverty and other deprivations must go hand-in-hand with strategies that improve health and education, reduce inequality, and spur economic growth – all while tackling climate change and working to preserve our oceans and forests. For more information, please visit: https://sustainabledevelopment.un.org/sdgs

AU is committed to the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) through effective and efficient institutional resources management, quality and innovative teaching and learning, research, national and international partnerships, continuing studies, inclusiveness, outreach, and sutainability. Accordingly, AU endeavors its best in ensuring that sustainability is embedded in its strategic initiatives.

In 2016, the United Nations representatives provided a Sustainable Development Lecture to the AU community. In support of the UN SDGs, AU has evaluated the SDGs, formulated and taken into consideration in developing its Strategic Plan 2017-2022. AU aligns its mission with SDGs by providing quality education, lifelong learning, scientific research, and community service. Moreover, AU has implemented sustainability-related initiatives in its operations, developed SDGs related policies, conducted community engagement and services that support the SDGs.

AU's efforts and support towards the SDGs are also evident in its students and alumni activities. In 2017, two very talented students of AU attended the Youth Assembly organized by United Nations at their headquarters in New York, USA. In 2018, a social media influencer and AU alumnae Maha Jaafar '16 was invited to the United Nations headquarters in New York in November to share her innovative efforts to combat hate, racism, and xenophobia as part of YouTube's "Creators for Change" initiative. In 2019, a delegate of AU students debated over a number of world hot issues as part of their participation in the Model United Nations (MUN) Conference, a three-day educational simulation, hosted by the American University in Dubai.

The SDGs were designed to achieve a globally sustainable future. These SDGs address the challenges that are faced day-by-day by individuals around the world, which are related to poverty, inequality, climate change, environmental deterioration, peace, and justice. It should be noted that the 17 SDGs are all linked among each other and are expected to be attained within 2030. AU strives its best for continuous improvements to support the sustainability of the United Arab Emirates by achieving the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs).
